

What you should know about TRANSFER TAXES

Illinois is a great place to live. But local elected officials have found a way to make it more expensive to stay in the state's communities by levying transfer taxes on real estate sales.

WHAT'S A REAL ESTATE TRANSFER TAX? Home Rule municipalities may impose a tax on buyers and sellers of real estate. These taxes are imposed at closing and can add significantly to the cost of selling private property.

How a transfer tax works

TRANSFER TAXES ARE ASSESSED WHEN A PROPERTY IS TRANSFERRED/SOLD.

Most municipalities in Illinois with transfer taxes charge a set amount per $1,000 of the sales price.

For example, in Aurora, sellers must pay $3 for every $1,000 in a transaction. That means a $200,000 home sale comes with an additional $600 fee tacked on at closing!

Some communities charge a per transaction fee that is the same no matter the amount of the real estate deal, but this is less common.

Who pays?

Most of the time, sellers pay. In some communities, buyers are hit with the tax. In Chicago, both buyers and sellers must pay a transfer tax.

In addition to the municipal transfer tax, each county in Illinois assesses a transfer tax at the rate of 50 cents per thousand dollars of the sale price.

What's the cost

Assuming you are in a community which has a transfer tax, you can pay as little as $50 per transaction, or as much as $10 per $1,000 of a real estate transaction.

How does a community impose a transfer tax?

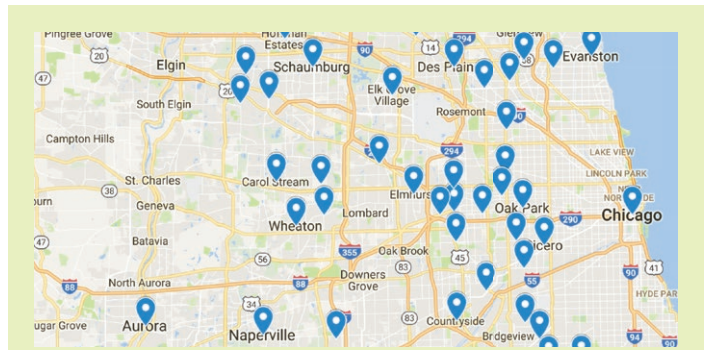

Since 1997, communities in Illinois must ask voters through a referendum for permission to impose a transfer tax. Even if a community already has a transfer tax, it still must ask voters for approval to adjust the tax rate.

An important note: Only a Home Rule community can impose a transfer tax. In Illinois, that typically means a municipality has more than 25,000 residents or voters in the community have agreed to yield direct say over tax and fee increases to their elected officials.

The dangers of transfer taxes

- 1 IT ADDS TO THE TAX BURDEN ON PROPERTY OWNERS: Many communities in Illinois already have high property taxes. After years of paying these taxes, owners are then obligated to pay one more tax when they sell their properties. These taxes add up, making it much more expensive to live in the state.
- 2 EQUITY KILLER: Transfer taxes are essentially an “exit tax” which chips away at the equity private property owners have built up over the years.
- 3 ONE OF MANY TAXES: Transfer taxes in and of themselves are costly. But, if they are added to a buyer’s closing costs they may come on top of expensive pre-sale inspection fees and requirements. For first-time buyers and those seeking affordable housing, transfer taxes can make realizing the dream of homeownership much harder.
- 4 TAX IMPLICATIONS: Transfer taxes cannot be deducted on your state and federal income taxes.
